JACOB S. COXEY WINS

Out in California, up in Maine and down in Florida "Coxey's army" is a household phrase. Sometimes it doesn't mean much, more often it doesn't mean the right thing, but it's handy.

In Massillon, where Jacob S. Coxey Sr., leader of the army still lives and espouses heart-felt causes, there possibly may be a few persons who never heard of him. The possibility that they will continue to be ignorant of his presence among them is slight.

Mr. Coxey, who now is 77 years old, polled 2,983 votes Tuesday to win the Republican mayoralty nomination. He ran three times as strong as his closest competitor. The present mayor ran third. It is generally conceded in Massillon that he will carry the election just as easily. Then it will be Mayor Coxey, once known as "General" Coxey.

This means national advertising for Massillon. Mr. Coxey was in the headlines when most current notables were in cradles. Even today, newspapers keep their eye on him. It would be an injustice to Massillon, of course, to insinuate that its voters could be convinced of the advantages of a famous mayor, but they are about to have one whether or not they have thought about it. At least, it seems that way. Mr. Coxey has run often for office; up to now he has failed just as often. This may be his chance to affirm himself with those who have reposed confidence in him on previous occasions.

Perhaps the best approach to the situation would be to congratulate both Mr. Coxey and Massillon, then sit tight and see how they get along together.

A WATCHDOG WITHOUT TEETH

Ever since the Paris peace pact was signed three years ago this month, there has been a tendency to regard it as a pillar of light leading civilized nations away from war. As an ideal conception this is excellent; practically, it is flimsy.

There has been considerable discussion most recently at the Williamstown Institute of Politics, on the advisability of "implementing" the pact, to make it more than an instrument of pure idealism. As it exists now, no machinery for peaceful settlement or for co-operation among governments is provided. Recourse to war "for the solution of international controversies," and renunciation of war as "an instrument of national policy" are condemned, but that is all. The ease with which parties are swept aside in the frightened panic of war is too well understood to permit faith in the protection of a watchdog without teeth.

The most direct exercise of the Paris peace pact up to this time has been Secretary of State Stimson's reproach to China and Russia at the time when these two countries were apparently working themselves into a state of war. In the name of the Paris peace pact, Mr. Stimson reminded both nations of their obligations; he received a tart reply for his trouble. Hostilities were broken off, but not because of the existence of a peace pact denouncing war. Russia was not afraid of a pact which had no "implementations" of enforcement.

Again, at the London naval conference there was an attempt to exercise the pact. The argument had all the strength of utter simplicity; if all the nations represented at London were signatories of a pact denouncing war why should huge fleets be maintained? France pointed out, that, as yet, no sufficient guarantee of the security without which disarmament was impossible had been extended.

There was no faith in a watchdog without teeth.

The world has moved closer to reality, perhaps, since the Paris peace pact was signed. The realization that the pact's strength as an idealistic argument against war is only a fraction of what it might become as a practical instrument in preventing war is growing. It will, or should, result in another highly important international development in the next few years.

What Others Say

AN EXPERIMENT WORTH TRYING

Reduction in the state budget seems to be welcome everywhere but in Columbus, where the state government is regarded as the greatest local industry. Merchants and landlords are complaining, while the newspapers are inclined to regard the economy policy as unwise.

A fair test of this policy will be afforded by the results. If the state government failed to function as it should and to perform the services expected of it because of a reduced number of state employees and insufficient appropriations, the policy adopted by the governor and the legislature will be adjudged unwise and steps taken to provide the revenues needed to restore the budget to the 1929-30 figure.

If, on the other hand, the state government functions smoothly and well; if with its reduced income it is still able to perform the expected services, even though certain state employees are forced to work a little harder, the fiscal difficulties of 1931 which forced the economy upon the state will prove a blessing in disguise.

For a generation there has been talk of the high cost of government and of the necessity of curbing it. But until revenues began to shrink nothing was done. With reorganization of Ohio's fiscal system this year and the increasing difficulty of tax collection a program of drastic economy became necessary. Depression made it inexpedient to impose heavier taxes on major industries.

The economy experiment is well worth trying. If every one from department heads down to clerks and stenographers do their best, it will succeed. The reduction in costs of the state government may then become permanent and will be a boon.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Stars Say—

For Friday, August 14

The astrological forecast today, while presaging some advantages and financial increase, sings of plans and projects with delays, impediments and vexations. There is an undercurrent of treachery and subtle attack, which may be successfully anticipated and vigorously dealt with since the mind will be alert, resourceful and under high-pressure.

Those whose birthday it is may have a contradictory year, with some benefits and financial prospects, but this by overcoming obstacles, delays, and intrigue and subtle attempts at fraud and betrayal. A child born on this day may be mentally keen, alert, aggressive and ambitious, attaining success by these qualities as well as by intrigue and craft.

RESINOL HEALS SEVERE CASE OF PILES

"A few years ago my niece was ill and after being in bed several months she developed a very bad case of piles. As nothing she had used seemed to help her I advised her to use Resinol Ointment which I had used with me. After a few applications she was greatly relieved and before long was entirely healed." LONDON, Aug. 13.—As Broadway means New York to America so does The Strand mean London to the English. Every hour of the forlorn day in those lonely outposts where the Empire has sent its flag-peppers—Canada, Africa, India and Australia—men are dreaming of The Strand. It is the symbol of home.

Like Broadway it has become cheap, small and vaguely disappointing. Yet no street in all London offers such an exciting flavor. Even the shop windows are taken romance, bulging as they are with pith helmets, compasses, spindles, veld shirts, puttees and jaunty amusements belt.

We set out this morning in a thin drizzle to wander along this curiously old and narrow Victorian highway. Crazily patched omnibuses were bobbing with umbrellas. Cockney women were shouting their heather, hawkers held out matches, toys and sundry gimcracks. Tawdry, yet appealing.

Where lines of traffic converge at Charing Cross a one-armed silhouette cutter sought out his patronage by pointing to his placard pasted with illustrious—Lloyd George, the Prince of Wales and Liddle Clive. I was anxious to see how he executed his art so handicapped.

So we stopped. Placing a sheet of black paper between his teeth he inspected us a few seconds and with sharp manicure like scissors began to nip away and in no time at all had my wife and me in profile—standing side by side in a typical morning mistral. He charged a six-pence.

In a drug store near what was once the old Hotel Cecil but now an office building a window card proclaimed: "Real American Soda." And it was not only real and tasty but the jerker was fresh—O, very fresh—from a chandlery store near the Grand Central.

Naturally we wound up our stroll at Simpson's. Like the Cafe de la Paix one is supposed to see every body at Simpson's at lunch. I saw only Thomas Burke. The charm of the place is in the service. Rooms are trundled up on huge silver topped bogeys and deft carving by John Bulls, come to life, is done before your eyes.

I am unable to do a nip-up over British cooking. To me it is heavy, unpalatable and flat. My only satisfying meal here was in the spirit of a lark. "Bucky" Taylor took me to a little tavern seemingly lost in the news near Knights Bridge. There was a soup of ox tails, a steak and kidney pie, a salad and Yorkshire pudding. The patrons were almost solely butlers, valets, grooms and other servants who came there on nights off. The proprietor today incidentally runs a two-floored place on Oxford Circus—a place frequented by the Piccadilly toffs. Swank.

London's aristocratic streets now have neat brass signs heralding: "American dentists." And I am told they have the biggest and most exclusive practices in the city. British teeth suffer from chemical reaction of the water and the American dentist has been the most successful in coping with it. But we don't suppose they can do much about those British buck teeth.

After lunch I strolled to Whitehall to glimpse the guards in horse tail hats, idled on Cockspur street, watched the pigeons around the Nelson monument in Trafalgar, picked up a Burberry raincoat with a white leather belt tra-la in Haymarket and then set off in a taxi for Houndsditch.

Houndsditch with its blowy denizens and array of dank pubs is to me one of the fascinating stretches in London's multiplicity of human habitations. Its name came from the fact it was a burial ground for dogs in Pepsys time. In days of cabbies it was their rendezvous. Today taxi drivers, busmen and private chauffeurs have taken it over and it is a jostle with Cockney haranguing and blimey bickering. These are types of the Hogarth unlovely etchings whose pleasantness are acrimonious but only a gesture—a bit of chaff.

In departing all high hatted and spruce for theater I stopped before a window mirror in the horse shed court of the Savoy to cop a final peek at my set up. "Ain't he purty?" yelled some one across the driveway. But I took no notice. Undoubtedly one of those "vulgar Aw-neerikans."

And after theater I half promised Tommy Watson and a group of Fleet streeters to run down the blades, sport cream colored high hats, braided coats and shoulders strung with binoculars. Very pip-pip. Quite.

Teach Baby To Be Independent Nothing is more fascinating than to watch the growth and development of a baby. From birth onward it is an interesting study.

The first year presents many trials and tribulations. It is a most important time, for during this period the baby grows rapidly. It undergoes the change from a helpless infant into a baby that laughs, plays, stands, tries to walk and talk.

In addition to growing, the child learns to eat and sleep at regular intervals. It learns how to hold up its head, to sit up, to stand and eventually to walk. Surrounding objects are of great interest to the youngster who is inquisitive and anxious to get hold of things.

At one year of age, the average baby weighs three times the weight at birth. This is approximately twenty-one pounds. Twenty-seven to twenty-eight inches is the measure in height.

At twelve months, baby's chubby cheeks are replaced usually, by a lengthening of the body. Some children remain plump at this period, while others grow tall, not gaining greatly in weight. It has been said, and truthfully so, that no two babies grow exactly alike.

At this age, the baby as a rule has been weaned. It has learned to take cow's milk and various solid foods. Now it should be able to hold a cup in the hands and be familiar with the uses of a spoon.

A great mistake most mothers make at this age is to continue treating the child as an infant. It is entering upon the period of early childhood and should not be treated as a baby.

Encourage the child to be independent. Of course, the child should be taught and helped. No better training can be encouraged than to have the child at an early age learn to do things on its own account.

Feeding and dressing alone, picking up toys and other objects from the floor, learning to pull off the stockings at bedtime, and playing alone—all these aid in the development of independence.

A child gifted with the virtue of independence will face the future problems and battles of life with greater ease. It is a quality which will grow more valuable with the years.

SYNOPSIS

Sally Rutherford, the last of a proud old southern family, following the ruin and suicide of her grandfather, determines to keep the heavily mortgaged Oakleigh plantation for her grandmother. A porter's lodge, facing the Dixie highway, gives her the idea of starting a hot dog stand. She arranges with a milkman, who says he is Mr. Forman, forman of the Winstead dairies, to deliver milk. He is really Samuel Forman Winstead only son of Henry Winstead, town banker and holder of the Oakleigh mortgage. Sam, well educated and traveled, prefers farming to finance. The Rutherford ladies "didn't know" the Winsteads, of carpetbagging stock, whose estate adjoined Oakleigh. Sally's milkman helps her get the Shuck ready for business. Antiques from Oakleigh are offered for sale. The venture is a huge success.

INSTALLMENT 9

A Miracle

Sally's old friend, Maud Lucas, came out one afternoon with a gay crowd of fashionable young people which filled the "Shack" to overflowing.

"Sally, old dear," cried Maud herself, dragging up a tall, dark young man, "this is little Lowndes Jennings. Lowndes, at last you behold Sally Rutherford herself!" She added gayly: "It's partly on his account we're here this afternoon, Sally darling. He's heard so much about you . . . and your waffles . . . and coffee . . . and your hot dogs . . . that he just had to come to prove it for himself."

The dark young man had a fine pair of gray eyes under straight black brows, a slight dark mustache which didn't conceal his handsome lips, and a seductive voice. The dark brows almost met over a nose slightly aquiline, and the chin jutted out intriguingly. Sally had been serving motorists all day—ordinary beings who gobbled their food and called for more with their mouths full, people who inhaled their coffee or their soft drinks noisily. This handsome and aristocratic young man who spoke in a voice reminiscent of the colonel's, who looked at one with beguiling gray eyes, and had the manner of the true Rutherford world, pleased her.

Sally Rutherford's place in the social sun was secure. She might lose all her worldly wealth—but she couldn't lose the fact that she was Sally Rutherford. Nor did she mean to; grandpapa would certainly expect her to hold the place to which she had been born. She had never had to think of it before his death, but now she felt that she must do so, for his sake. The girl's courage, the fact that she was making a success of a business altogether foreign to all her traditions—and theirs—made them like and admire her all the more. So Lowndes had been hearing the praises sung by many. She intrigued him. Before the crowd left he had made up his mind to see more of this girl.

As the winter wore on, she would have been gratified at the way her venture was turning out except for that frightful cloud of debt hanging threatening over Oakleigh. She could almost see it lowering. No little stand like hers, be it ever so well patronized and its assets materially aided by flotsam from a century old attic, could hope to meet that interest and support the wants of grandpapa and herself, feed and pay the servants—and escape complete disaster. As for paying off the mortgage itself . . . out of a hot dog stand . . . she smiled dryly. As the six months drew to a close and the day of payment loomed ever nearer, her anxiety showed in her face, despite her training and her courage, as Mr. Forman, who now came only in the early morning hours, noted resentfully.

"Damn that infernal mortgage! Yes—praise be that the Winsteads hold it and not somebody else!" he thought. "But what in the Sam Hill am I going to do?" And he took his head in his hands, rumpiling his hair.

The day before the interest was due, the mail brought Miss Sally Rutherford a canceled interest note, signed by Rupert A. M. Rutherford and stamped "paid".

The overwrought girl gasped, put her head down on the counter, and wept and wept. She couldn't help it. O. God, dear God, kind God! That hardhearted Mr. Winstead had been staved off and could not take Oakleigh away for another six months! It was a reprieve as from the gallows. God had heard her frantic prayers and grandpapa was safe in her place for another half year! Who knows what can happen in six months?

And she questioned: Who could have done this beautiful, this gracious thing? Somebody who had known and loved grandpapa, naturally. Perhaps some one of the lawyers, maybe, even Mr. Sinclair himself had managed it, delicately refraining from writing her, only sending her the canceled note. She prayed for him with tears, for she was almost frenzied in her relief. But in reply to her not of fervent gratitude Mr. Sinclair said he knew nothing about it. Nevertheless, it had been paid, and Oakleigh was hers and grandpapa's for another half year.

"You look positively happy this morning," commented Mr. Forman surveying her from the doorway with approval. His back was to the light, but she thought idly that she had never seen him so tall, so strong, so manly. That khaki uniform of his certainly became him vastly. As usual, too, he was bareheaded, his bright hair a gold helmet. Really, a handsome fellow. Not so handsome as Lowndes Jennings, perhaps, for this boy belonged to a harder world.

It came to her that she herself was beginning to become acclimatized to that same matter of fact, work for your living world that she had changed mightily since she had first entered it—and it wasn't such a bad world after all. Because there was reality in it. Reality means working alongside other people, understanding them, doing your share, not a mere looker-on.

Perhaps, some day, she might even be glad of this strenuous experience—if ever she won her way back to her own place—the world in which men like grandpapa—and Lowndes Jennings—moved.

Mr. Lowndes Jennings, as he had promised himself, had come back several times to see her. He brought her fine candy, a spray of orchids, a book of poems—some evening soon she was going out with him in that fast gray car of his. As soon as she could manage an evening off, she had told him, when he asked her diffidently. He was always a little diffident with her, as though she mattered so much to him! It was intoxicating—after a day of dealing out—hot dogs and pop and chewing gum!

"Yes," she answered the milkman solemnly. "I am happy. Today is different from what I had expected, because yesterday some thing wonderful and beautiful happened!" And she asked naively: "Do you believe in miracles?"

"I don't know," said he, lounging up to the counter. "I suspected once that one was happening to me, but I never have been quite sure that it was meant for me after all. Miracles usually happen to somebody else, if you notice. Why do you ask? Any miracles been happening to you?"

"Yes. The most miraculous thing about a miracle is its beautiful unexpectedness, the sheer heavenly surprise of it, don't you think?"

"Again I don't know. Miracles don't happen to people like me, I'm afraid. But if miracles happen to anybody, why, they ought to happen to you. . . . nice, fat, juicy ones at that."

"This one was," said she, ecstatically, and her face lighted up.

"I'm glad," said he simply. He was. He reflected that any miracle which brought that look to Sally Rutherford was well worth the price, and thank the Lord! sang his heart.

"Business is pretty good, too, isn't it?" he queried.

"Better than ever. We sell out everything we have."

"You go after all the town trade you can get, too," he advised, after a moment's thought. "There's money in teas and such gimcracks. But don't neglect the road trade. It's steady, there's very little overhead, the quickie comes from it, and that's where the real profit comes from. I was wondering if you wouldn't like to sell sugar cane juice? For five cents a glass, using paper cups. Next year, when the cane begins to move, you look into the idea. You'd clean up a nice little sum."

"That," said she, alertly, "is a real idea, Mr. Forman."

"The best thing about you is that you're so quick to catch on, once a real idea is presented to you," said he. "Underneath that bob of yours you've got some real business brains tucked away."

"Thank you. It occurs to me that I haven't seen you for some time."

"Busy. I suppose you wouldn't notice it in the papers, but Mr. Sam Winstead has had to address the dairymen's convention. He's president of the County union, and it's supposed in this state. Introduced new methods. Raised the standard. So they wanted to hear what he had to say."

"I'm sorry, but I hadn't noticed. I've been—rather worried lately."

"Until the miracle happened? Was it a personal miracle or a business miracle?"

"All miracles are personal, aren't they? This one touched me to the quick, because it touched Oakleigh. And Oakleigh—" she stopped abruptly. Why should she talk thus intimately—to the forman of a dairy? True, her estimate of him had changed, had risen. He was a college man, carefully trained, capable, independent, and there was about him a timeless something, a breadth, a grasp, which she had to respect when she began to see it. He was exceptionally good looking, kindly, likeable, helpful. His singing voice was really delightful—she was always after him to have that beautiful voice trained.

"Why, it's trained—I sang in the Glee club, and I've done duty in a choir," he protested. "Do I sound so untrained?"

"No, you do not. Now, if a little training has that much effect, you should have real teachers," she told him earnestly.

"You know that song you first heard me singing? The one you like? 'Flor de Espina'? I always connect that song with you: 'Flower of Thorns,'" he said unexpectedly. "Because you are, you know."

She said nothing; merely looked at him reprovingly; merely he never learn his place—and hers? (Copyright: 1931: By Marie Conway Oemler.)

"TOASTING" expels SHEEP-DIP BASE naturally

(Black, biting, harsh irritant chemicals)

present in every tobacco leaf

"They're out—so they can't be in!"

Every LUCKY STRIKE is made of the finest tobacco leaves the world can offer—the finest from Turkey—the finest from Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, Georgia, and the Carolinas—the Cream of many Crops throughout the world. But all tobacco leaves, regardless of price and kind, as nature produces them, contain harsh irritants. LUCKY STRIKE'S exclusive "TOASTING" Process—a process that mellows, that purifies, that includes the use of the modern Ultra Violet Ray—expels certain harsh irritants naturally present in every tobacco leaf. We sell these expelled irritants to manufacturers of chemical compounds, who use them as a base in making sheep-dip*, as well as a powerful spraying solution for fruits, flowers and shrubs—enough to permit the daily dipping of over 50,000 sheep or the daily spraying of many thousands of trees. Thus, you are sure these irritants, naturally present in all tobacco leaves, are not in your LUCKY STRIKE. "They're out—so they can't be in!" No wonder LUCKIES are always kind to your throat.

MARKETS

MARKET RISE IS LED BY OILS

Absence of Pressure On Rails Is Help In Climb

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—Led by a rise in the oil shares, stocks developed rallying tendencies today. Absence of pressure against the rails was a constructive factor.

Resumption of posted prices in East Texas by a prominent petroleum producer at an advance of 10 cents a barrel from recent average levels turned speculative attention to the oil issues and there were gains of a point or more in seaboard (formerly Mexican seaboard), Atlantic refining and standards of New Jersey and California. U. S. Steel, American Telephone, Case, Du Pont and Alaska Juneau and Drug rose 1 to 1-2.

New York Central made up most of a decline of 2 3-8 and Alchison rallied more than 3 points. Brunswick terminal railroad was active, up nearly 2.

Call money renewed at 1 1-2 per cent.

NEWS FROM NEARBY DISTRICTS

BEATTY TO FILE AS INDEPENDENT

E. Liverpool Candidate, Primary Loser, Will Run Again

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., Aug. 13.—A three-cornered race for mayor is promised at the Nov. 3 election here as a result of the announcement today by James C. B. Beatty, defeated in the Republican primary election, that an independent ticket petition would be filed with the election board before Sept. 1.

Beatty, who renounced the Democratic party after two defeats for the Ohio gubernatorial nomination in Ohio, was among nine candidates who trailed O. J. Herrington, sr., winner of the G. O. P. majority in Tuesday's primary election.

Beatty, a pottery jobber, said he would file for the race against Herrington and Mayor Ralph C. Benndum, nominated for a fourth term by the Democrats, but the Ohio law bars him from running for an office for which he was defeated in the primaries.

J. G. Clark, winner over City Solicitor W. S. Stevenson, who sought a second term, led all Republican candidates by polling 2,763 votes. He defeated Stevenson by 1,169.

If S. W. Crawford accepts the Democratic nomination, given him as a result of 53 voters' writing his name on the ballot, Clark will be opposed for solicitor in the fall election.

Crawford, former mayor here and later Columbiana county sheriff and probate judge, had not decided tonight.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL
And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Remotest substitute, 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

NEW STAFF AT RESERVE
JIGGS DONAHUE SELECTED
OPEN WITH PURDUE TEAM

A complete new coaching staff will guide the destinies of Western Reserve university's 1931 football eleven when the Red Cats make another bid for recognition in the collegiate gridiron hemisphere this fall.

This fact became a certainty with the appointment of Edward A. ("Jiggs") Donahue, of Fairport, Mass., as the second of two assistants to Head Football Coach Tom Keady. The other assistant is John Drescher, for two years captain of the Carnegie Tech team.

Keady, a coach at Quantico Marines for several seasons, during which the Marines piled up an impressive string of victories against nationally-rated institutions, was appointed recently to succeed Gordon Locke when Locke accepted a position of assistant coach at the University of Iowa, his Alma Mater.

Donahue, a graduate of Washington & Lee university and captain of that eleven in his senior year when the southerners were undefeated and rated as champions of the south, has been head coach at Clemson college for four years. Included among Clemson's victories during Donahue's reign were wins from Georgia, Auburn and Tennessee.

ARRIVAL of the 1931 "Reserve triumvirate" is anxiously awaited on the university campus. The trio is expected here by Sept. 8, a week before practice starts.

Between 50 and 60 candidates are expected to vie for positions on the Reserve varsity. A number of last year's regulars probably will find plenty of competition in holding their positions this year, according to indications.

Donahue will handle the backfield candidates and the freshmen team while Drescher works with the linemen. Keady will supervise both coaches and train the team as a unit.

Reserve's schedule for the coming season follows: Oct. 3, Purdue at Lafayette, Ind.; Oct. 17, Pittsburgh at Pittsburgh; Oct. 24, Hiram at Cleveland; Oct. 31, Oberlin at Oberlin; Nov. 7, Syracuse at Syracuse; Nov. 14, Case at Cleveland; Nov. 21, Ohio Wesleyan at Cleveland.

Negotiations are under way to schedule a game with a nationally known team for Thanksgiving day.

Parker H. Davis, writer and statistician for the American Sports Publishing company, has again compiled the list of outstanding scoring plays made in football during the 1930 season. Here they are: Longest scoring run, 105 yds. by George Wilson of Idaho vs. Whitman.

Longest scoring runback of a kickoff—Floyd Doughty, Western Maryland vs. Baltimore.

Longest scoring runback of punt—96 yds. Ralph Murff, Centenary vs. Texas Aggies; John Branch, North Carolina vs. Maryland; Clifford Battles, West Virginia Wesleyan vs. Wayneburg; Louis Weller, Haskell vs. Oklahoma Aggies.

Longest run from scrimmage for score—George Wilson, Idaho vs. Whitman.

Longest forward pass for touchdown—John Grossman, Rutgers vs. Lafayette, 58 yds., to Donald Courson.

Longest run from a completed pass—Larkin Jennings, Citadel vs. Wofford, Run of 80 yds. pass from J. Ashton Gray.

Longest run from intercepted pass—98 yds. by Clifford Battles, West Virginia Wesleyan vs. Wayneburg.

Longest drop kick—Ralph Hewitt, Columbia vs. Cornell, 60 yds.

Longest kick from placement—47 yds. Lawrence Morris, Gettysburg vs. Villanova; Lyle Maskell, Washington State vs. Washington. (Both kicks won games.)

43 RUNS SCORED ON 50 HITS IN WEIRD BATTLES

New York Wins First By 18-1 Margin; Indians Annex Second, 17-7

EARL AVERILL HITS 22ND HOMER IN 2ND

Chicago Cubs Take Two In Philadelphia; Giants Slide Back to 3rd

Approximately 20,000 baseball fans witnessed two of the wildest contests in Cleveland baseball history at League park, Wednesday as the Indians broke even in a twinbill with the New York Yankees. The Yankees won the opener, 18-1 while the Clevelanders took the second, 17-7.

A total of 43 runs were compiled on 50 hits and 30 bases on balls from nine pitchers in the two slugfests. The battles lasted 4 hrs. and 40 min., fans seeing all kinds of baseball, both good and bad, but mostly the latter.

Lefty Gomez held the tribe helpless in the opener but Sarge Connally obtained revenge for the Indians in the second, aided by Earl Averill's 22 home run of the season. Cleveland used five hurlers and the Yankees four.

A season or two ago Sunny Jim Bottomley was the slugging idol of St. Louis fandom. A brilliant first baseman and an effective hitter, he had things almost his own way with the crowds. Then he went into an almost total eclipse as a slip in his batting was followed this season with the rise of the Rochester recruit, Jim Collins, and "Sunny Jim" became a bench warmer.

But Bottomley is back on the job now and he apparently means to hold it. He didn't get into action until a week ago when Collins was hurt but since then he has been playing with all his old time dash and hitting harder than ever.

Aids Cards to Victory
"Sunny Jim" was right in there back of Jess Haines and Flint Rhem yesterday to help the Cardinals take a double victory over the Brooklyn Robins. In the first clash he hit a home run and two singles and he added a triple in the second. Aided by this clouting, the Cardinals won the opener 5 to 0, as Haines turned in an eleven-hit shutout then pounded out an 8 to 5 triumph in the second game although Johnny Frederick hit two homers and Lefty O'Doul one.

The double victory enabled the Cards to remain 8½ games ahead of the Chicago Cubs, who went into second place by winning two from the Phillies. The Cubs had to go ten innings before they hammered Sheriff Blake from the mound with five runs to win the first game 7 to 3, but the second was easy as they piled up 18 hits to win 12-1.

Giants Lose Ground
The New York Giants slid back to third when they could get no better than an even break with Pittsburgh's Pirates. Remy Kremer checked all the Giants except Mel Ott in the first clash and Pittsburgh won 6 to 4. Ott drove in three of the Giant runs with two homers. He hit another four sacker in the second game, won by the Giants, 9-0.

Keeping pace as usual, Philadelphia's Athletics and Washington's Senators each lost a game. George Barnshaw failed to hold an early Philadelphia lead and Detroit finally won by a 7-6 count in the 12th inning. Washington went down in the regulation time before Vic Frasier and the Chicago White Sox 11 to 1.

Boston's Red Sox made it two straight over the St. Louis Browns, 6 to 5, when Sammy Gray made a costly error in the ninth inning after giving five runs in the fifth.

Bill Tilden Meets Kozeluh August 16
CLEVELAND, Aug. 13.—Seeking to avenge his recent defeat, William T. Tilden, known as "Big Bill" on tennis courts all over the world, will meet Karel Kozeluh, Czech professional net star, on the Tennis and Racquet club courts here in a return match August 16.

Kozeluh conquered the Philadelphia here when the two played an exhibition match at the Racquet club during their tour of the country. It was the first time the Czech had beaten Tilden during the tour.

Learn To Swim For Safety, Sport Is Advice of Expert

(By International News Service)
AKRON, Aug. 13.—Teaching more than 6,000 persons to swim and rescuing 153 from drowning are two notable achievements in the life of Joe Henry, Akron's "human fish."

During his 23 years as a life guard at popular swimming resorts in this vicinity there has never been a life lost while Henry was on duty. His students have learned plain and fancy swimming and diving from him and some have later won fame for themselves in aquatic competition. Henry himself has won championships galore.

"Learn to swim first for the sake of safety, then for health, and finally for the sport of swimming," is the "human-fish's" creed. "Start children swimming early so they will have no fear of the water."

Spiking the popular notion that drowning persons come to the surface three times, Henry said that a drowning person can come to the surface as many times as his strength and breath will permit.

McLeay's Ace 2nd Scored At Salem Golf Club Course

Don McLeay's ace on No. 6 hole at the Salem Golf club Tuesday was the second hole-in-one scored at the Salem course, records revealed today.

The first was made by Clyde Bryan on No. 9 hole, 249 yards from the tee, on September 6, 1929.

McLeay scored his ace on the No. 6 hole at the course, using a No. 6 iron for the shot, a distance of 145 yards.

The club professional, paired off with Ralph Knepper, tied for second place in the P. G. A. tournament held this week. First place was won by Albert Alcroft and John Stroh of the Youngstown Country club course and Willie Scott and Abe Cooper of Squaw Creek.

The two pairs tied with best ball scores of 67. McLeay and Knepper shot a 68 tie with Jack Thompson and Vine Kelter of Youngstown Tippecanoe club.

Salem Team Listed as Entry in Ohio Bantam Grid League

Salem may be represented in the Ohio Bantamweight Football association in plans arranged at a meeting of district grid officials at the Hotel Portage, Akron, Wednesday night.

An organization was formed composed of seven cities, Akron, Youngstown, Cuyahoga Falls, Canton, Kent, Cleveland and Salem. Two teams are entered from Youngstown making the league an eight-cornered affair.

Plans are being made here for organization of a Salem junior team with Russell Stallsmith, who represented Salem at the meeting, and J. M. Kelley in charge. Efforts are being made to secure backing of the Foremen's club of the Mullins Manufacturing corporation.

Harry Jacobs of Kent, coach of the nation-wide famous Kent Bearcats, was elected president of the body with Paul P. Sheeks of Akron secretary-treasurer. Joseph Duffy, Youngstown, was named vice-president.

The league adopted rules fixing maximum weights of grid-players at 112 pounds while no player is permitted to compete who has passed his 16th birthday on September 1. Akron, two Youngstown teams, Kent, Canton and Cuyahoga Falls are certain entries with Salem and Cleveland still in doubt.

MOVIES

Edward G. Robinson's famous melodrama based on true-to-life experiences of New York's "Nick the Barber" is the attraction coming to the State theater-Friday and Saturday. Entitled "Smart Money", the picture shows Robinson in a role that adds to the fame he accumulated in "Little Caesar".

Evalyn Knapp, James Cagney, Noel Francis and Rafta Harolde are cast in leading supporting roles. The entire picture is based on Robinson's experiences as a small town gambler who goes to the big city, is played for a "sucker" by a clique of dishonest card sharps but comes back to beat the crooks at their own game.

Buck Jones, absent from Salem screens for more than a year, returns to star in "The Texas Ranger" at the Grand Friday and Saturday. Carmelita Geraughty is his leading lady.

Today's Features

With a simple profoundly human story that millions have laughed and wept over, "Daddy Long Legs," provides entertainment for Salem screen patrons at the Grand today.

Marking the first time that the charming Janet Gaynor and the polished Warner Baxter have been co-starred, this is the screen adaptation of Jean Webster's well loved play.

Both the leading players are ideally suited to their roles, and an excellent supporting cast, headed by Una Merkel, John Arledge, Claude Gillingwater, Sr., and Kathryn Williams, and splendid direction combine to make "Daddy Long Legs" one of the real cinematic treats of the year.

"Judy's" flaring tirade against her oppression in the "Orphan Home," "Pendleton's" decision to send her to college, their dawn of love, misunderstandings and final reunion, are but a few of the story's emotional peaks.

State Attraction

Those who have not already seen the fascinating Helen Twelvrees in her newest picture, "A Woman of Experience," at the State theatre, will have their final opportunity today.

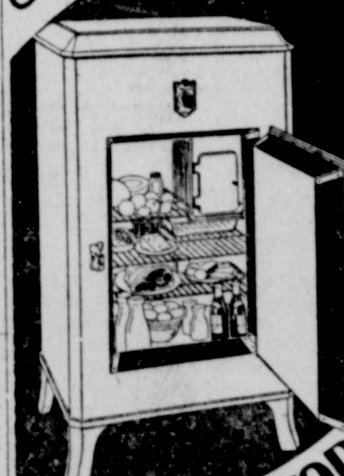

The picture which is full of romance and action has a Viennese background. A splendid cast and story and the talents of Miss Twelvrees have made it a picture of note.

Outstanding players in the film are William Bakewell, Lew Cody, Zasu Pitts and H. B. Warner.
